Jordan was born in Stamford, Connecticut, and raised in the greater Tampa area, where she developed a strong sense of community and an early appreciation for the power of advocacy. She went on to attend Florida State University, earning her undergraduate degree while cultivating a passion for critical thinking, problem-solving, and effective communication.

Driven by a desire to make a meaningful impact, Jordan pursued her Juris Doctor at Barry University Dwayne O. Andreas School of Law in Orlando, Florida. During her time in law school, she enriched her legal education through an international study program in Siena, Italy, in partnership with Tulane University. There, she focused on international law as well as art and cultural property, gaining a broader global perspective that continues to inform her approach to legal analysis and advocacy.

After being admitted to the Florida Bar, Jordan began her career in civil litigation, representing clients in both state and federal courts across a diverse array of cases. Her experience has equipped her with a well-rounded understanding of litigation strategy and a deep commitment to achieving favorable outcomes for her clients.

Jordan is currently an associate at Vernis & Bowling's Central Florida office, where she handles a wide range of civil defense matters. She concentrates her practice on personal injury and premises liability litigation, approaching each case with diligence, attention to detail, and a client-focused mindset.

Outside of her professional life, Jordan enjoys discovering new restaurants, spending quality time with friends and family, and enthusiastically cheering on the Seminoles.
